TOKYO, Oct. 13.—The Japanese cabinet today approved women's suffrage on demand of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The decision gave women a vote for the first time in Japan's long history. It was expected that upwards of 21,000,000 may be eligible to participate in the country's forthcoming general elections.

The cabinet acted only 48 hours after MacArthur gave the new Japanese premier, Baron Kijuro Shidehara, orders to enact universal suffrage and effect other democratic reforms.

Shidehara's cabinet also lowered the voting age of men from 25 to 20 and the minimum age for holding office from 30 to 20, then voted to make the eligible ages for women conform.

Home Minister Kenzo Matsumura reported to the cabinet that 4,800 police chiefs had been discharged throughout Japan in compliance with another of MacArthur's directives.

Many of the chiefs had been active agents of the militarists in their "thought control" subjugation of the Japanese people.

The cabinet also discussed other democratic reforms demanded by MacArthur, including guarantees of free speech and free assembly.

Informed sources said Dr. Yasaka Takagi, an authority on the United States constitution, probably would be appointed an adviser to Marquis Koichi Kido, lord keeper of the privy seal, to discuss possible revision of the Japanese constitution.

Former Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye conferred with Shidehara this afternoon on the question of liberalizing the constitution. Shidehara was understood to believe that the reforms demanded by MacArthur could be accomplished without revision of the constitution, while Konoye argued that some changes were necessary.

The American Eighth army, meantime, reported the arrest of nine high-ranking Tokyo embassy officials of the Nanking and Manchurian puppet governments. They presumably will be turned over to the Chinese for disposition.

The Nanking government officials apprehended comprised the embassy counselor, four embassy secretaries, the naval attaché and the military attaché, Wang Jung-Tin, puppet ambassador of the (Continued on Page Two)

Warship Shuttle Service To Bring Men Home Urged

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Warship shuttle-service to bring the boys back home was proposed today by Sen. William F. Knowland, R., Calif., a former Army major, as congress' demobilization headache rapidly grew worse again.

News that Britain's ocean liners Queen Elizabeth and Aquitania no longer will be available to transport American troops cast gloom over Capitol Hill.

The ships will be used to bring Britain's boys back from the Far East, and congressmen admitted "you certainly can't quarrel about that."

Nevertheless legislators called it "a terrible disappointment" and "the worst blow yet" to the nation's hopes for speedy return of its fighting men.

Two different senate committees—the war investigating and military affairs committees—went to work to see what could be done to make up for the loss.

Acting Chairman Edwin C. Johnson, D., Colo., of the military committee summoned Army and Navy officials to report on demobilization progress at public hearing. (Continued on Page Two)

SCHOOLS REOPEN FOR NAZIFIED GERMAN YOUTH

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—American plans for re-educating Germany's Nazified youth were given fresh impetus today by an announcement that more than 50 of 700 secondary schools in the American Occupation Zone will reopen Nov. 1. Some additional colleges and universities will re-open at the same time.

Maj. Gen. M. C. Stayer, in charge of public health and welfare activities in the zone, said local youth associations would be formed to occupy those unable to attend school because of lack of facilities. These will supplant the former Hitler youth movement.

More than 250,000 students are enrolled in the American-conceived elementary school program, which is well ahead of schedule, Stayer said. About 14,000 teachers have been enrolled, but an additional 16,000 are needed. More than 5,528,661 emergency textbooks have been printed for elementary schools.

Lobbyists Get Definite Statement On Views Of Congressmen

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—The Congress of Industrial Organizations is conducting one of the most intense lobbying drives ever directed at congress, with still undetermined results.

By train and car, CIO delegations have flocked to the capital from most of the states east of the Mississippi river to ask congressional support of the CIO legislative program. In all more than 2,000 representatives have made the trip.

Differing opinions may be heard among congressmen about the effectiveness of the campaign. Some obviously have been angered by threats of political reprisals. Some say CIO pressure has sometimes cost it support.

House Democratic Whip Robert Ramspeck of Georgia praised CIO delegations from nine southern states yesterday for the manner in which they submitted their arguments.

"I want to say quite frankly that some CIO delegates have hurt the CIO and the cause of labor by their tactics," he said.

NAVY REVEALS GHOST HELLCAT

Latest Secret To Come To Light Is Fighter Plane Without A Pilot

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—The Navy's latest secret to come to light is the "ghost" Hellcat—a high-powered fighter plane that flies and fights without a pilot.

The Navy told details of the radio-controlled plane for the first time after the Army announced it had been flying B-17's without pilots as "death bombers" over Germany. Those bombers were worn out Flying Fortresses. They were loaded with explosives and guided by radio to crash on their targets.

So far as is known, the ghost Hellcat developed by the Navy is the world's only standard military aircraft for which all operations performed by a pilot—taking off, flying and landing—have been exercised by remote control.

The plane is controlled in the take-off by a "pilot" on the ground operating a control panel set up in a truck. When the plane gets into the air, control is taken over by another "pilot" in a mother plane (Continued on Page Two)

SOLDIER PEEVED OVER TIMING OF GOP LITERATURE

CINCINNATI, Oct. 13.—A soldier-voter from Cincinnati now stationed in New Hampshire was a little peeved when his absentee ballot arrived, accompanied under separate cover by Republican campaign literature.

But when the postman dunned him for two cents postage due on the literature, that was the last straw.

"Someone told me the jerks that military air mail is only 6 cents, neglecting to say this applies only to overseas mail," the irritated soldier griped.

"Coincidence," cried Carl Wencel, chairman of the board of elections, when asked about the simultaneous arrival of the ballot and the printed list of Republican candidates.

Army Refuses To Yield Control of Argentina; Peron May Still Be Free

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 13.—Reliable sources said today that the army has refused to yield control of Argentina to the supreme court and instead will attempt to form a new cabinet under President Gen. Edelmiro J. Farrell.

These informants said Gen. Eduardo J. Avalos, war minister and leader of the present military coup, informed the democratic union late last night that he was not disposed to turn over power to the court.

His purported statement directly contradicted an earlier announcement by a spokesman for a group of 700 army and navy officers at the Circulo Militar (military club) who supported Avalos in the coup that unseated Col. Juan D. Peron, former Argentine "strong man," Wednesday.

The Circulo Militar spokesman, Col. Juan C. Montes, had said that Farrell's resignation was in the hands of the military and that an announcement turning over of government authority to the supreme court would be made at 10 a. m. today.

However, reliable sources said Avalos bluntly told the democratic union that he intended to form a new cabinet under Farrell consisting of civilians who were "my own friends." Other members of the Farrell cabinet resigned yesterday.

It was believed Avalos' reluctance to give up army control of the government stemmed from the fact that the military wanted a chance to redeem itself from the (Continued on Page Two)

PUBLIC BACKING FAYETTE DRAFT BOARD STAND

WASHINGTON, C. H. O., Oct. 13.—Chairman Howard D. Fogle of the "striking" Fayette county draft board, said today that "the public seems to be with us in our campaign to halt inductions until the government cleans up all these strikes."

Fogle and his fellow board members sat tight on their decision to refuse to induct county draftees. The state board in Columbus was considering the situation but no official announcement was forthcoming.

Fogle said his mail was getting heavier all the time and that most of the mail and telegrams he was receiving showed the public was on his side.

The chairman said that although the board would not send any Fayette youngsters in for induction, 18-year-olds would still register and report for pre-induction physical examinations.

He precipitated the crisis by ordering nine 18-year-old boys to go back home after they had passed their physical examinations and were ready to go to Columbus for induction.

Fogle told them they could volunteer for service if they wanted to, but that they wouldn't be drafted for a while—anyway, not as long as he was chairman and "those strikes keep up."

Home Receiver Sets May Be Delivered Before Spring, FCC Is Informed

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Color television in your home is just around the corner.

Peter Goldmark, Columbia Broadcasting System engineer, told a federal communication commission hearing yesterday that color television sending and receiving equipments are already being manufactured.

He said samples of the first receiver sets will be available by the end of January. Television pictures in color were sent successfully last Wednesday from one New York skyscraper to another.

Goldmark told the commission Columbia's color television tests had achieved "ghost free" reception for the first time in history due to the use of an inexpensive directional antenna and "the high frequency of the color television band."

"Ghosts" in television are similar to echoes in radio and appear as shadows on the television screen.

Black and white television has been given low frequencies in the radio spectrum, ranging from 44 to 216 megacycles. Color television, on the other hand, will work on high frequencies between 480 and 920 kilocycles.

Although low frequency television is already in progress and many broadcasters and manufacturers are ready to start turning out sets and programs, they are not willing to run the risk of suddenly finding all their equipment obsolete.

Allen B. Dumont, president of Allen B. Dumont Laboratories, Inc., Passaic, N. J., asked FCC at yesterday's hearing to assure the public and the industry that its present plans for allocation of television channels will be permanent for at least 10 years.

PUBLIC SEES WAR OF FUTURE

Army Air Force Gives World Glance At What Next War Will Be Like

WRIGHT FIELD, Dayton, O., Oct. 13.—The Army Air Force today gave the world a glimpse of what a future war can be like, a war which could be over in half an hour after the first attack. Robot controlled bombs, equipped with television to report progress and permit course correction, were shown to be far from impossible.

The Air Force fair, staged to give the taxpayers an idea of what their money has gone for in the war just ended, included a demonstration of the first requisite of the "nightmare bomb" described above, the pilotless plane.

That little Culver scout plane used for demonstration yesterday nosed over and cracked up on landing was considered by army officials no more than a nuisance. The plane took off from Lockbourne Army Air Base at Columbus, O., flew here and circled the field before its crack-up landing at nearby Patterson Field.

The television-equipped bomb already has seen action. In use, it dropped from the control plane in the general area of the target. The bombardier, though a television transmitter in the nose of the bomb, watches the ground coming up and—by remote radio control—corrects the bomb's course to guide it into the proverbial pickle-barrel.

Radio-controlled bombs were used with telling accuracy in the Burma campaign to knock out bridges. Such early bombs, shown here, could be guided only to the right or left. They already are outdated.

HIGHER PRICES ALSO EXPECTED TO BE APPROVED

Wallace Says More Pay Is Necessary To Help Labor Recover From War

FIRMER STAND INDICATED

Schwellenbach Said To Be Ready To Demand Early Coal Settlement

By United Press

There was a strong indication today that the administration might sanction substantial wage boosts, with compensatory increases in prices, as the reconversion battle of labor for higher pay continued unabated.

More than 450,000 workers were on strike or idle because of work stoppages, most over wage increase demands, as the public heard the first statement on possible future wage policy from a high government official.

Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace, in a radio network broadcast, said last night that higher wage rates must be given labor to cushion loss of the war's overtime and incentive take-home pay.

Wallace, declaring that industry should be allowed price relief, said that labor had the right to ask for raises of 15 to 20 per cent. The commerce secretary said he felt, however, that workers could not be given the 30 per cent increases demanded in many labor disputes.

This statement came as telegrams reflecting public displeasure over failure to end the strike—caused reconversion snarl and especially the soft coal mines walk-out, threatening a winter fuel shortage, poured into the White House and the labor department.

Apparently taking cognizance of public wrath, Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach was believed ready to take a firmer stand and demand action toward settlement of a dispute over the United Mine Workers demand that it be named bargaining agent for supervisory workers.

Schwellenbach, scheduling his seventh day of negotiations with UMW officials and operators, faced not only a barrage of telegrams from the public but statements from other government agencies that the U. S. would face a depression-like winter unless the strike of 193,000 miners was settled.

Fuel Administrator Harold L. Ickes said coal rationing to domestic consumers was not an immediate prospect, although industry already had suffered a grievous blow from the loss of more than 1,000,000 tons of fuel a day.

Among late developments along the labor front:

1. Transportation for some 750,000 residents in 71 communities was disrupted early today as nearly 1,800 employees of the Eastern Massachusetts street railway went on strike. The workers asked a 40 per cent wage hike for mechanics and a 30-cent hourly boost for drivers and motormen.

2. The crippling eastern strike (Continued on Page Two)

Authorities reported Ater suffered a broken neck and crushed head.

He was the son of the late William Ater and Mrs. Minnie Ater, who operates a restaurant in Columbus. Young Ater formerly was associated in business with his mother, but came to New Holland about four years ago.

The body was to be taken to the Kirkpatrick funeral home in New Holland Saturday after the Fayette county coroner completed his investigation of the accident.

There was no immediate announcement of the number of soldiers who will be brought from Europe to help take over the work of some 64,000 striking stevedores.

In London alone 1,500 soldiers began unloading 70,000 tons of food from 25 ships in the Royal Albert Dock. Four other ships were anchored in the Thames awaiting berths.

Robot controlled bombs, equipped with television to report progress and permit course correction, were shown to be far from impossible.

The Air Force fair, staged to give the taxpayers an idea of what their money has gone for in the war just ended, included a demonstration of the first requisite of the "nightmare bomb" described above, the pilotless plane.

That little Culver scout plane used for demonstration yesterday nosed over and cracked up on landing was considered by army officials no more than a nuisance.

The plane took off from Lockbourne Army Air Base at Columbus, O., flew here and circled the field before its crack-up landing at near-by Patterson Field.

The television-equipped bomb already has seen action. In use, it dropped from the control plane in the general area of the target. The bombardier, though a television transmitter in the nose of the bomb, watches the ground coming up and—by remote radio control—corrects the bomb's course to guide it into the proverbial pickle-barrel.

Radio-controlled bombs were used with telling accuracy in the Burma campaign to knock out bridges. Such early bombs, shown here, could be guided only to the right or left. They already are outdated.

FIRMER STAND INDICATED

Schwellenbach Said To Be Ready To Demand Early
Coal Settlement

By United Press
There was a strong indication today that the administration might sanction substantial wage boosts, with compensatory increased prices, as the reconversion battle of labor for higher pay continued unabated.

More than 460,000 workers were on strike or idle because of work stoppages, most over wage increase demands, as the public heard the first statement on possible future wage policy from a high government official.

Secretary of Commerce Henry A. Wallace, in a radio network broadcast, said last night that higher wage rates must be given labor to cushion loss of the war's overtime and incentive take-home pay.

Wallace, declaring that industry should be allowed price relief, said that labor had the right to ask for raises of 15 to 20 per cent. The commerce secretary said he felt, however, that workers could not be given the 30 per cent increases demanded in many labor disputes.

This statement came as telegrams reflecting public disapproval over failure to end the strike—caused reconversion snarl and especially the soft coal mines walk-out, threatening a Winter fuel shortage, poured into the White House and the labor department.

Apparently taking cognizance of public wrath, Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach was believed ready to take a firmer stand and demand action toward settlement of a dispute over the United Mine Workers demand that it be named bargaining agent for supervisory workers.

Schwellenbach, scheduling his seventh day of negotiations with UMW officials and operators, faced not only a barrage of telegrams from the public but statements from other government agencies that the U. S. would face a depression-like Winter unless the strike of 193,000 miners were settled.

Fuel Administrator Harold L. Ickes said coal rationing to domestic consumers was not an immediate prospect, although industry already had suffered a grievous blow from the loss of more than 1,000,000 tons of fuel a day.

Among late developments along the labor front:

1. Transportation for some 750,000 residents in 71 communities was disrupted early today as nearly 1,800 employees of the Eastern Massachusetts street railway went on strike. The workers asked a 40 per cent wage hike for mechanics and a 30-cent hourly boost for drivers and motormen.

2. The crippling eastern state soft coal strike forced production of steel down toward its lowest levels since depression days. Steel plants scheduled production cuts up to 28 per cent by Monday night, which would idle thousands more workers.

3. In New York harbor, striking AFL longshoremen said they would free paralyzed shipping by starting at once to service ships supplying armed forces overseas and bringing troops home to this country.

4. One thousand Carnegie-Illinois Steel mill workers were idle at Gary, Ind., because of slowdowns by CIO crane men. At 12 of the plant's mills—biggest in the world—production was at a standstill.

5. A government conciliator stepped into the 30-week motion picture studio strike in Hollywood as production remained curtailed at Warner Bros., and Universal lots. The conciliator, Earl J. Ruddy, sought to end a controversy marked recently by bloody conflict.

6. In Detroit, the Ford Motor Co. announced it would resume full production of 1946 cars in its U. S. plants Monday. The company planned to call back 35,000 workers laid off when strikes in suppliers' plants halted assembly lines.

7. The AFL laborers union asked permission to take a strike vote among employees of 3,100 mid-west trucking companies and "hundreds of other companies operating in, into and out of" Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas.

We're 'Furriners' To The Dwellers Of Mountains In South

Mrs. Ray Hardin, Williamsport, newly elected president of the Major John Boggs chapter, national society, United States Daughters of 1812 was in charge of the meeting of that organization at the meeting for which Mrs. Otton King was hostess at her home, West High street.

During the business meeting the society voted to donate to the John Brown university merchant marine library and to Crosson scholarship fund.

The name of Mrs. Donald Watts was presented to the chapter for membership. Miss Mary Heffner was appointed as chairman of the December meeting which will be guest day and which will be held at the home of Mrs. Noah Spangler with Mrs. Harvey Sweyer as co-hostess.

A very interesting paper was read by Mrs. King on "The American Highlanders, The Mountaineer and Their Descendants". One hundred percent Americanism is typified, Mrs. King said by the people who inhabit the highland sections of seven Southern states, Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama. An area of about 112,000 square miles with an unofficial population of 4,000,000 persons.

These people, Mrs. King said live in much the same fashion as did their ancestors in the days of Boone thinking the same thoughts hugging the same prejudices. They were loyal almost to a man to the Union cause during the Civil war even in Alabama and South Carolina. Although some of them have never seen a railroad and have never traveled as far as 20 miles distant from their birthplace they are a self reliant people of keen intelligence although no education. They have intermarried to a degree unknown elsewhere in America. Girls are married at 14 and becomes an old maid at 18 years of age. A fat mountaineer is a curiosity, they are a conspicuously tall race, sinewy and of astonishing endurance almost indifferent to cold, thinking nothing of going barefoot in the snow and inhabiting shacks whose floors and walls show cracks as wide as a finger for the winter to blow in. Their shiftness is rather than of hopeless economic outlook than lazy indolence, loafing not being fitted to their nervous physique.

The tillage of the soil is rude and as destructive as they read of in pioneer history. They have practically no utensils except home made ones and they are makeshift. Corn is their staple crop, in fact their only crop although some rye, oats and wheat are raised along the bottoms. The most profitable crop raised in the mountains is ginseng. The roots take 8 years to mature and 2 acres will produce 25,000 roots and bring from $5 to $10 per pound.

This is the country where the moonshiners flourish. They are not called moonshiners there however, but blockaders.

depths into which Peron's influence had plunged it.

The newspaper La Nacion quoted Avalos as saying that he hoped to announce the names of other new cabinet ministers today. La Nacion said Avalos doomed hopes of early elections by announcing that they would be held on April 7 as originally scheduled by Peron.

However, Avalos was quoted as saying there would be no "official" government candidate for president.

Whereabouts of Peron were a mystery. Despite widespread reports that he had been taken into custody for military trial, a diplomatic source said that he saw Peron and Eva Duarte, his protegee, enter Peron's apartment building from an automobile early today.

Acting Police Chief Aristobulo Mittelbach told newsmen that he knew nothing of the reported arrest of Peron and presumed the colonel was at his home. Avalos, questioned by newsmen, merely said he had not seen Peron.

Peron had ruled the government with an iron hand from his position as vice-president, war minister and labor minister until his resignation under army pressure Wednesday.

Wild shooting broke out three times last night in the crowded plaza San Martin outside the Circulo Militar, where army and navy officers were conferring on the government crisis.

Unconfirmed reports said 10 persons were killed and 40 wounded in the first clash when police—many of whom support Peron—started trying to disperse the crowd of 30,000 to 40,000. Who fired the first shot was not clear, but police were reported to have brought sub-machine guns into action.

Police also fired warning shots on two later occasions when the crowds re-formed, but no casualties were reported from the later incidents.

Police warned by radio that the state of siege imposed under Peron still was in effect and they would break up any political demonstrations attempted.

Shortly before midnight, the government forbade any dispatch abroad, or publication inside Argentina, of reports of any further disturbances.

ings next week. One of the first things he wants to know is the effect of losing the liners.

Knowland, pointing out that the "Queen" was able to carry a division a trip—"a little over 15,000 men"—told a reporter he thought every spare American transport plane and warship should be used in returning veterans from the Pacific and European theaters.

"From what the fellows in the Pacific write me," he added, "they'd be glad to sleep in a sleeping bag on deck if they could just get home."

He advocated a regular "shuttle-service," with warships heading back across the seas for more men as soon as they have unloaded troops here.

"It may be expensive," he said, "but I think we have an obligation to do it."

Knowland, an Army major turned senator who only recently landed back here himself, got quick support from Sen. Homer E. Ferguson, R., Mich.

Ferguson said he feared the loss of the two superliners might "upset the whole point system" and urged that "every possible battle-ship be used to bring boys back."

Another senate source said that where once the Army was flying home nearly 50,000 men a month by plane, the rate has now been cut one third. The reason given was loss of high-pilot pilots.

Ferguson said if the Army had to discharge pilots used to bring troops home "it should hire them back as civilians" to continue the job.

EX-RED PLANS TO DENOUNCE U. S. COMMUNISM

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 13.—Louis F. Budenz, former Communist editor, planned a nationwide tour today to denounce Communism.

Budenz said in a press conference yesterday that known Communist leaders in the United States get their orders from someone higher.

Budenz resigned from the Communist party and managing editor of its official newspaper this week to rejoin the Catholic church. He vigorously denounced Communism during the press conference arranged after he arrived here to become an instructor at Notre Dame university.

DRIVER CITED AFTER AUTOMOBILES COLLIDE

Maynard Warner, route 4 Circleville, posted $10 bond, following his arrest on a charge of failing to stop at a stop street by Circleville police.

The police reported that the Warner car hit a car driven by D. W. Grant, student from Columbus, at the corner of South Court and Ohio streets at 1:50 a. m. Saturday.

Pearl Downing, Williamsport, and Arthur Massey, Circleville, who were in the student's car were injured slightly. The right side of the student's car and the front end of the Warner car were damaged.

The great need of the mountaineers is the training of their own boys and girls for leadership. Every outsider is a "furriner" to them. Ordinary grade schools would be of small help, she thinks but vocational schools that would turn out good farmers, good mechanics and good housekeepers are badly needed there.

which guides the Hellcat on its mission.

Returning to the field the air control pilot switches over to the ground control operator after lining the ghost plane up for its approach to the runway. The ground operator then lands the plane and taxis it over to the line.

The ghost Hellcat is the product of Navy experimentation which began in 1922. It is a development far superior to that used in the simpler target drones—a small pilotless aircraft used by both the Army and Navy for anti-aircraft training.

The Drones, pioneered by Movie Actor Reginald Denny and developed for Navy use at sea by another movie actor, Lt. Cmdr. Robert Montgomery, have only five control channels.

In contrast remote control of the Hellcat is so sensitive that even as small a part as a tailwheel can be turned by radio to steer the plane on the ground. The brakes can be governed to provide control on the runway and selection can be made of the exact degree of engine speed desired for take-off, landing or high speed combat maneuvers.

The Navy did not go into details about the armament or fighting abilities of the ghost Hellcat.

It said that Navy engineers already have combined radio control with television to make Drones an attack weapon of the "kamikaze" type. Controlled by radio from a mother plane and equipped with the mechanical eye of television, a Drone can be sent crashing into targets miles away from the controlling pilot in the mother plane.

more than 100 CIO representatives as "a good friend of labor" by Paul Christopher, Tennessee CIO director.

While the southern delegation may have been less belligerent than others, they followed the same pattern that earlier delegations have followed. The labor representatives assembled in the house caucus room where they were "briefed" by Robert Lamb, United Steel Workers legislative representative. Some of their spokesmen addressed about 20 congressmen who attended.

Then the delegation divided into groups by states to call on their respective congressmen.

The delegations all have button-holed congressmen, confronting them in their offices or in the corridors around the house chamber. Each group carries a mimeographed form to record the members' attitudes on legislation in which the CIO is particularly interested—the full employment bill, higher unemployment compensation, higher minimum wages, the anti-poll tax bill and a permanent fair employment practice committee.

Members are asked to fight the Ball-Burton-Hatch labor relations bill.

Lamb told the southern delegates to get "a yes or no answer—not an if, and, or but." They reassembled late in the afternoon to report on their efforts.

Most of the reports from the South appeared inconclusive, although some were favorable. At the other extreme was the report of Sen. James O. Eastland, D., Miss., who was quoted as saying he opposed the CIO demands and didn't like the CIO.

ings next week. One of the first things he wants to know is the effect of losing the liners.

Knowland, pointing out that the "Queen" was able to carry a division—a trip—a little over 15,000 men—told a reporter he thought every spare American transport plane and warship should be used in returning veterans from the Pacific and European theaters.

"From what the fellows in the Pacific write me," he added, "they'd be glad to sleep in a sleeping bag on deck if they could just get home."

He advocated a regular "shuttle-service" with warships heading back across the seas for more men as soon as they have unloaded troops here.

"It may be expensive," he said, "but I think we have an obligation to do it."

Knowland, an Army major turned senator who only recently landed back here himself, got quick support from Sen. Homer E. Ferguson, R., Mich.

Ferguson said he feared the loss of the two superliners might "upset the whole point system" and urged that "every possible battleship be used to bring boys back."

Another senate source said that where once the Army was flying home nearly 89,000 men a month by plane, the rate has now been cut one third. The reason given was loss of high-point pilots.

Ferguson said if the Army had to discharge pilots used to bring troops home "it should hire them back as civilians" to continue the job.

EX-RED PLANS TO DENOUNCE U. S. COMMUNISM

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 13.—Louis F. Budenz, former Communist editor, planned a nationwide tour today to denounce Communism.

Budenz said in a press conference yesterday that known Communist leaders in the United States get their orders from someone higher.

Budenz resigned from the Communist party and managing editor of its official newspaper this week to rejoin the Catholic church. He vigorously denounced Communism during the press conference arranged after he arrived here to become an instructor at Notre Dame university.

the great need of the mountaineers is the training of their own boys and girls for leadership. Every outsider is a "furriner" to them. Ordinary grade schools would be of small help, she thinks but vocational schools that would turn out good farmers, good mechanics and good housekeepers are badly needed there.

which guides the Hellcat on its mission.

Returning to the field the air control pilot switches over to the ground control operator after lining the ghost plane up for its approach to the runway. The ground operator then lands the plane and taxis it over to the line.

The ghost Hellcat is the product of Navy experimentation which began in 1922. It is a development far superior to that used in the simpler target drones—a small pilotless aircraft used by both the Army and Navy for anti-aircraft training.

The Drones, pioneered by Movie Actor Reginald Denny and developed for Navy use at sea by another movie actor, Lt. Cmdr. Robert Montgomery, have only five control channels.

In contrast remote control of the Hellcat is so sensitive that even as small a part as a tailwheel can be turned by radio to steer the plane on the ground. The brakes can be governed to provide control on the runway and selection can be made of the exact degree of engine speed desired for take-off, landing or high speed combat maneuvers.

The Navy did not go into details about the armament or fighting abilities of the ghost Hellcat.

It said that Navy engineers already have combined radio control with television to make Drones an attack weapon of the "kamikaze" type. Controlled by radio from a mother plane and equipped with the mechanical eye of television, a Drone can be sent crashing into targets miles away from the controlling pilot in the mother plane.

Manchurian government, and his military attack also were seized.

Five students from the Yokohama industrial high school were each sentenced to five years in prison in Tokyo district court for participating in raids on the homes of former premier Admiral Kantaro Suzuki and Baron Kichiro Hiranuma, then president of the privy council, on the night of Japan's surrender.

Both Suzuki and Hiranuma were away when the youths called at the homes. They set fire to Hiranuma's residence.

The newspaper Mainichi reported that Emperor Hirohito has decided not to attempt reconstruction for the present of the imperial palaces destroyed by American Superfortresses in a raid last May 25. Instead, the dispatch said, he will "share the difficulties with the populace."

A resumption of spring football practice for high schools which has been banned in Ohio since 1942, was voted by state high schools 225 to 127 according to a count made by the Ohio High School Athletic Association. The board of control of the association approved the outcome of the referendum on the subject.

The proposal finally approved was that high schools could take their choice of having spring football drills and then resuming practice on September 1 or ignore the spring practice and start to work on August 20.

HIGH SCHOOLS APPROVE SPRING GRID PRACTICE

Harold W. Emswiler, commissioner of the association, said six votes were not counted because they were improperly marked.

Another proposal that once a matter had been brought up for a vote, it could not be brought up again for three years, was also approved.

Thus high schools are assured of spring practice, if they want it, until 1948, at least.

While the southern delegation may have been less belligerent than others, they followed the same pattern that earlier delegations have followed. The labor representatives assembled in the house caucus room where they were "briefed" by Robert Lamb, United Steel Workers legislative representative. Some of their spokesmen addressed about 20 congressmen who attended.

Then the delegation divided into groups by states to call on their respective congressmen.

The delegations all have button-holed congressmen, confronting them in their offices or in the corridors around the house chamber.

Each group carries a mimeographed form to record the members' attitudes on legislation in which the CIO is particularly interested—the full employment bill, higher unemployment compensation, higher minimum wages, the anti-poll tax bill and a permanent fair employment practice committee.

Members are asked to fight the Ball-Burton-Hatch labor relations bill.

Lamb told the southern delegates to get "a yes or no answer—not an if, and, or, but." They reassembled late in the afternoon to report on their efforts.

Most of the reports from the South appeared inconclusive, although some were favorable. At the other extreme was the report of Sen. James O. Eastland, D., Miss., who was quoted as saying he opposed the CIO demands and didn't like the CIO.

engineers demonstrated for the public their conviction that a powerful mad dictator of the future could launch enough robot controlled, rocket propelled, television equipped bombs to paralyze a nation's ability to make war before the victim knew what had it.

The exposition here, which includes a mile of exhibits and hundreds of planes, bombs and torpedoes, movie shows and working models to give the public the inside story of victory through airpower, was a frankly staged bid for more funds to continue experimentation.

Said Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, D., Wyo., a member of the powerful senate military affairs committee, and Sen. Chan Gurney, R., S. D., a member of the same committee, said the show had demonstrated the need for continued development of our air forces.

"We are going to have to spend millions to keep this work going," said Gurney.

NATIONAL STRENGTH
As far as Gen. George C. Marshall can see now—and in matters involving national safety he can probably see at least as far as any of us civilians—there is no immediate farewell to arms, and may not be for many years. At a time when most of us have assumed that these recent wars are over, he warns Americans flatly to "prepare or perish."
We must be strong enough, as a nation, to defend ourselves against waves of international gangsters, in whatever quarter they may come against us. We must abandon our happy-go-lucky attitude, accept the facts of international life, and be ready to suppress an outbreak of irresponsible violence on the other side of the earth as if it were here in the next country. For the world is small now, and little fights quickly grow into big fights, from which the world may take fire again.
So there can be no farewell to arms, in the sense of what happened after other recent wars. The arms may not have to be used, but they must be bright and ready—like their owners. Research must continue, for new forms of offense and defense. And there might as well be a new sense of the power of religious faith, which can be as important as atomic bombs.

THE FORT KNOX GOLD
People with $20,000,000,000 in idle money ordinarily like to put it to some use. Uncle Sam, who is in this state on account of the famous gold reserve buried in Fort Knox, Ky., has been an exception to the rule. Now he is beginning to think it over.
Why should not a substantial part of this amount be lent to Great Britain? This would not involve further Treasury borrowing, as a loan from any other source would do. Nor would it further increase the federal debt.
Some conservative economists are expected to object that, to the extent that the gold is temporarily removed as a reserve against gold certificates, it represents a step toward fiat money. But the amount left at Fort Knox should be more than enough for any coverage desired.

Gen. MacArthur is going to abolish Shintoism; and if that's what makes the Japs that way, he has our permission.

The atomic bomb is based on the old American principle, "don't tread on me."

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS
By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—People have written me asking an explanation of the strange new tactics of Russia in diplomacy.

What puzzled them last was the editorial in Izvestia setting forth reasons for the inconclusive results at the London peace conference. The bitterness of the tone was apparently amazing to many Americans.

The really important facts of the matter, which State Secretary Byrnes presented in a calm voice (and the Republican John Foster Dulles fully confirmed) were omitted, particularly the fact which proved Russia guilty for the deadlock, namely that the Soviet delegation did not simply wish to withdraw the invitations to China and France, and refused a compromise, but reversed itself suddenly after days of silence and claimed the invitations should never have been sent.

In short, they did not tell their people that they reversed their position, or that by doing so, they presented the United States and Britain with a proposition which could not be honorably accepted—as their delegates well knew.

In typical Russian style Izvestia launched out with a tirade about a conspiracy between Britain and the United States to "unload the guilt of failure from a sick head to a healthy one." Now they could not have dared this pretense without leaving out the most important basic facts.

Such palatable and plain deceptions are naturally something new in major diplomacy into which Russia has now come with a loud voice.

To understand the tone and technique you must first realize that Izvestia is not a newspaper. An editorial taking the same tone against Russia in this country would mean nothing more than the expression of the man who wrote it, or the paper.

Izvestia represents an escapist Russian technique for expressing official announcements. The Izvestia editorial was just as official as the Byrnes statement.

The Soviet foreign office does not dare or care to take direct responsibility for its position, but goes to the extent of hiding Stalin's views, visible right before your eyes, in the guise of an editorial. This is a sort of Le Gerdermain in which the Magician stands with his back to the audience so all can plainly see whence the rabbits come, yet we and the Russian people are supposed to pretend we do not know.

These deceptions represent what American scientists might term a childlike personality. The Russian mind is not childlike, but it is preponderantly a Slavic type of mind, and therefore an emotional mind, one easily given to mysticism. It is furthermore a peasant mind which further accentuates its Slavic qualities. It can write bitter, dark literature, but the amount which ever attained the quality as mild classics is small. Nor has it developed any great art. Offhand I cannot recall a single world masterpiece which is Russian.

The modern art which it produces, but in which it does not lead (the Spaniard peccasse and the French led that movement) is devoted to abstractions entirely. They have never produced anything I have heard the world call beautiful. In music they have distinguished themselves and in the ballet they are supreme—but only in the ballet of all the arts.

I think this is due to their domination by politics. Russia is ruled by what the

Treatment of Stomach Ulcers

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
ULCER of the stomach and first part of the bowel is known as peptic ulcer. It does not always require hospital treatment nor even that the patient remain at rest. According to Doctor T. Grier Miller of the University of Pennsylvania, if there are no complications present, patients with this disorder may be up and about during treatment, but to get best results they must cooperate in every way.
Ulcer of the stomach is a condition which tends to recur, but if the treatment is continued, these recurrences may, in a measure, be prevented.

Attacks of Pain
In ulcer there usually are attacks of pain which come on from one to three hours after meals. There may also be some sickness to the stomach and vomiting. The pain is usually located in the pit of the stomach.
The treatment consists in regulation of the diet, good habits of physical and mental relaxation and the avoidance of emotional upsets. Alkaline substances taken internally under the doctor's directions are also helpful.

The diet is made up of frequent meals of soft or liquid foods, such as milk and cream, gelatin, cream soups, pureed vegetables, crackers and butter, cream cheese, eggs and custards. For some patients, meat and fish, except pork, may be included when properly cooked, that is, roasted, baked, or broiled.
When the symptoms of the ulcer disappear and the X-ray shows that the ulcer has healed the patient must be warned to continue with the diet of the non-irritating foods and to take milk or some alkaline substance between meals and at bedtime. He also should make sure that he gets enough sleep and rest and does not overdo or become emotionally upset.

Ulcers have a tendency to recur, particularly in the spring and fall. Hence it is a good idea to have examinations made at these times, including an X-ray of the stomach and bowel. In other words, ulcers can only be successfully handled medically by treatment over a period of years.

"The Devil got well, the Devil a saint was he."
Much of the evil that was momentarily hidden for the duration has broken out recently like a sudden rash. And here we are going haywire. Not only abroad. But within our own country. Among our own people.

Labor seems to many to have gone completely haywire. Certain demands on capital were in the cards. But not this wholesale striking.

Labor may ride to its own fall unless it slows down its own present heading pace. This is the opinion of Ralph Chaplin, one of the most dramatic personalities within its own ranks.

Chaplin, who is from Tacoma, Wash., has been in the capital for a few days' stop on a crusading tour of the country. He hopes to spread the doctrine of a new and reasonable concept of the relationship between labor and capital. Chaplin was an early rebel against capitalism. As a member of the IWW. Indeed, he so vigorously protested against the injustices to the working man that he was locked up for five years in Fort Leavenworth, the federal penitentiary.

Now Chaplin thinks labor needs to calm down and take stock of itself before swinging the pendulum too far back. Labor desperately needs a new leader.

"And the man to lead it?" I asked.
"There is one man in this country who could lead labor out of the confusion in which it has plunged itself," said Mr. Chaplin, his zealot's eyes glowing. "That man is John L. Lewis. I used to fight Lewis on the west coast when I was a laboring man. But I know that he has the qualities of a leader."

"Lewis has the intelligence, the courage and the guts of the jaw that inspires."
"What he is thinking now, I do not know. But I believe he has the greatest opportunity of his whole life. Most labor leaders have lost touch with labor. They are not really interested in the working man. Nor his difficulties. They are simply interested in themselves; in being leaders."

Neither Sidney Hillman, head of the C. I. O., nor William Green, Federation of Labor president, would be of help to labor in the mess it has got itself into, added Chaplin. "But John L. Lewis could save the situation, if he would."

SANDRA enjoyed having Mrs. Fennimore as her guest, particularly after her approval of Spenser's work made her manner less austere. It was fun to visit, talking about Chicago and friends there—Capitola, Mr. Benet, Bob Wake-man, others in the store. And persons, less close to Sandra's old life, but of interest nevertheless.
All the same, she was not sorry when her Chicago friend terminated her stay to get back to the demands of the child welfare committee.
"I've been here four days," the gray-haired woman said. "That, for me, is an orgy of a vacation. Especially now when there is so much work to be done." She looked steadily at Sandra for a long moment. "Is that the hat Spenser selected for you? The one he bought before train time?"
"No. It isn't that one. But it is another he selected for me. And bought for me. He feels like such a grownup paying for things that I haven't the heart to stop him." She chuckled. "Anyway, this was only four ninety-eight, in the basement of Brooks Downtown."
"It looks like what his mother used to wear. Not that hers were four ninety-eight, but the general idea is there." Her eyes dropped. "I'm sure he bought the cameo for you, too."

"Yes. He found it last Saturday afternoon. For a beginner Spenser is very temperamental. He refuses to work on Saturday. That is our shopping day. You know, Mrs. Fennimore, I think Spenser is happy. Not that I deserve the credit. Belinda deserves part of it and the rest goes to Spenser. He seems to have perfected his own scheme of being happy."

"Don't underestimate yourself, Sandra dear. You have helped Spenser, just as I knew you would." The noise of the train chugging in just then made Mrs. Fennimore raise her voice. "You're quite a girl, Sandra! Quite a girl!"
"I like hearing you say so. But don't forget that Spenser has helped me, too."
"Yes. You look wonderful. You both do. I can go back to work and never give either of you a thought." She laughed at what she had said and hurriedly corrected it. "A thought of worry, I mean." She kissed her friend. "Goodbye, Sandra."

"Goodbye. And many thanks." For what amounted to nothing longer than a polite instant of waiting, the girl stood in the warm California sunshine watching Mrs. Fennimore go up the train steps. Then she turned and walked swiftly across the platform of the Glendale station.
She was impatient to get back to the studio to be with Spenser. That was her life now, those hours of routine, so considerable of a young boy's health that they were, in turn, benefitting Sandra. Not that Spenser didn't work. But it was so mixed in with rest periods.

When it first occurred to her she was at the studio with Spenser, sitting on the sidelines as she put handtuicks in the fine white batiste that was to be vests in gingham suits for herself and Belinda.

When the boy plunked down beside her, to rest, she said: "I could be back at work, Spenser. Obviously puzzled, he did not answer. She gestured with the white material. "You can see that I am much better. This proves it." She repeated: "I could work again."

After a while he asked: "You mean we would go back to Chicago?"
"Well," said the girl uncertainly, "that is where I did work."

"But I don't want to go back to Chicago, Sandra. It gives me a rotten sensation merely to consider it." Spenser stood up. "I like it here. I like being with you and Belinda, here in California, where there is sunshine and the ocean. And I like being in the sticks. I'm hanged if I'll go back to Chicago. Treatment of Stomach Ulcers

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

ULCER of the stomach and first part of the bowel is known as peptic ulcer. It does not always require hospital treatment nor even that the patient remain at rest. According to Doctor T. Grier Miller of the University of Pennsylvania, if there are no complications present, patients with this disorder may be up and about during treatment, but to get best results they must cooperate in every way.

Ulcer of the stomach is a condition which tends to recur, but if the treatment is continued, these recurrences may, in a measure, be prevented.

Attacks of Pain

In ulcer there usually are attacks of pain which come on from one to three hours after meals. There may also be some sickness to the stomach and vomiting. The pain is usually located in the pit of the stomach.

The treatment consists in regulation of the diet, good habits of physical and mental relaxation and the avoidance of emotional upsets. Alkaline substances taken internally under the doctor's directions are also helpful.

The diet is made up of frequent meals of soft or liquid foods, such as milk and cream, gelatin, cream soups, pureed vegetables, crackers and butter, cream cheese, eggs and custards. For some patients, meat and fish, except pork, may be included when properly cooked, that is, roasted, baked, or broiled.

The foods should be taken every two hours, five or six times a day if possible. If not, there may be three to four meals a day with milk and alkaline substance given between meals. If necessary, vitamin preparations and those containing iron may be prescribed. Some patients can take fruit juices while others cannot. Just before bedtime, food or alkali should be employed and the alkali should be at hand for use during the night if the patient awakens because of pain.

Certain sedative or quieting drugs may be employed to promote relaxation and sleep. The most satisfactory ones, according to Doctor Miller, are the barbiturates. Of the alkaline substances he prefers aluminum trisilicate or magnesium hydroxide.

Symptoms Fade

When the symptoms of the ulcer disappear and the X-ray shows that the ulcer has healed the patient must be warned to continue with the diet of the non-irritating foods and to take milk or some alkaline substance between meals and at bedtime. He also should make sure that he gets enough sleep and rest and does not overdo or become emotionally upset.

Ulcers have a tendency to recur, particularly in the spring and fall. Hence, it is a good idea to have examinations made at these times, including an X-ray of the stomach and bowel. In other words, ulcers can only be successfully handled medically by treatment over a period of years.

CHAPTER FORTY
SANDRA enjoyed having Mrs. Fennimore as her guest, particularly after her approval of Spenser's work made her manner less austere. It was fun to visit, talking about Chicago and friends there—Capitola, Mr. Benet, Bob Wake-man, others in the store. And persons, less close to Sandra's old life, but of interest nevertheless.

All the same, she was not sorry when her Chicago friend terminated her stay to get back to the demands of the child welfare committee.

"I've been here four days," the gray-haired woman said. "That, for me, is an orgy of a vacation. Especially now when there is so much work to be done." She looked steadily at Sandra for a long moment. "Is that the hat Spenser selected for you? The one he bought before train time?"

"No. It isn't that one. But it is another he selected for me. And bought for me. He feels like such a grown-up paying for things that I haven't the heart to stop him." She chuckled. "Anyway, this was only four ninety-eight, in the basement of Brooks Downtown."

"It looks like what his mother used to wear. Not that hers were four ninety-eight, but the general idea is there." Her eyes dropped. "I'm sure he bought the cameo for you, too."

"Yes. He found it last Saturday afternoon. For a beginner Spenser is very temperamental. He refuses to work on Saturday. That is our shopping day. You know, Mrs. Fennimore, I think Spenser is happy. Not that I deserve the credit. Belinda deserves part of it and the rest goes to Spenser. He seems to have perfected his own scheme of being happy."

"Don't underestimate yourself, Sandra dear. You have helped Spenser, just as I knew you would." The noise of the train chugging in just then made Mrs. Fennimore raise her voice. "You're quite a girl, Sandra! Quite a girl!"

"I like hearing you say so. But don't forget that Spenser has helped me, too."

"Yes. You look wonderful. You both do. I can go back to work and never give either of you a thought." She laughed at what she had said and hurriedly corrected it. "A thought of worry, I mean." She kissed her friend. "Goodbye, Sandra."

"Goodbye. And many thanks." For what amounted to nothing longer than a polite instant of waiting, the girl stood in the warm California sunshine watching Mrs. Fennimore go up the train steps. Then she turned and walked swiftly across the platform of the Glendale station.

She was impatient to get back to the studio to be with Spenser. That was her life now, those hours of routine, so considerable of a young boy's health that they were, in turn, benefiting Sandra. Not that Spenser didn't work. But it was so mixed in with rest periods.

Today's Horoscope

A birthday today means that you have a capacity for leadership, great achievements and for influencing others. You are studious and contemplative. You are adaptable and sharp in your judgments. You seek personal as well "take a day off" for safety and relaxation.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are advised that they should take stock of all possessions, assets, resources and personally valued property and comforts, since these are under threat of sinister and secretly planned designs and intent, with schemes, subtle lures and intrigues to waylay the innocent and unsuspecting. Personal carelessness, improvidence, extravagance and excesses may exact varied penalties.

A child born on this day should have particular training in right feeling, right thinking, right conduct, as deviation from these might bring great sorrow and unhappiness.

For Sunday, October 14

SUNDAY'S horoscope shows a swift turnaround into the quest for the romantic, adventurous, affectional, social, with parties, trips and unusual forms of festivity, all of which may be frowned upon by superiors, parents, and elders. But since serious efforts are under constructive aspects it may be as well to seek pleasures and thrills but with due discretion.

Those whose birthday it is may be obliged to find their compensation and comfort in the unusual, unorthodox and exceptional or novel, or possibly in romance, parties, dramatic pursuits or events, as serious workaday efforts are under a thwarting influence. In all manner of activities or ambitions it will be necessary to carry on without the cooperation or sanction of elders or superiors.

A child born on this day may have versatile creative talents, in science, art, music, drama, but its erratic urges may prevent support from higher ups. Its social and romantic ideals may find happy expression.

recreation, lessons, meals and so on that he was scarcely aware of working.

He was most aware of it when Belinda was there. For her he pattered. No other visitor on the set could affect him. But that little girl, giving him purposely scornful glances, or worse still, no glance at all, could make him act twice. Once for the camera and once for her.

Sandra realized she was riding along, in the automobile lent her by the studio, grinning to herself. People would think she was a total zany. She managed to drag a sober curtain over her face, then put her head back on the cushions. The ride to Beverly Hills was a long enough one so that she could catch a nap.

As the weeks went by Sandra's happiness increased. She could even think about Gordon without feeling as though some hard physical blow had been struck at her heart. Oddly, her thoughts about him were connected with their first meeting, when he had been brusque and hateful, rather than the one time he had spoken, and shown, his love.

Undenially her new composure was largely due to her improved health. No trembling maddened her. She had no irrepressible urge to burst into sudden tears. She even designed, and made, a pair of dresses. One for herself and a twin for Belinda to wear on week-ends in town.

It was fun to watch the little girl positively rip from her school uniform. "This stinker! I wish I could wear my new dress all the time. Boy, the girls' eyes would hang out on sticks. They'd die. Make some more, Red. Oh, please!" So she did. At first it did not dawn on her that she was proving her recovery; she simply was making companion frocks for herself and a pretty little girl. And then she realized the significance of what she was doing.

When it first occurred to her she was at the studio with Spenser, sitting on the sidelines as she put handtuks in the fine white batiste that was to be vests in gingham suits for herself and Belinda.

When the boy plunked down beside her, to rest, she said: "I could be back at work, Spenser." Obviously puzzled, he did not answer. She gestured with the white material. "You can see that I am much better. This proves it." She repeated: "I could work again."

After a while he asked: "You mean we would go back to Chicago?"

"Well," said the girl uncertainly, "that is where I did work."

"But I don't want to go back to Chicago, Sandra. It gives me a rotten sensation merely to consider it." Spenser stood up. "I like it here. I like being with you and Belinda, here in California, where there is sunshine and the ocean. And I like being in the flicks. I'm hanged if I'll go back to Chicago." He sat down again, on the floor this time, and rested his head against the young woman's knee. "Let's not discuss it further, Sandra."

Perhaps he was right, she thought with relief. The matter could be decided later; an appropriate moment would present itself. She, as much as the British boy, was reluctant to change anything about their placid existence.

However, she did say: "You can't stay in California forever, Spenser. You'll have to—." She stopped and stretched her neck, in an effort to dislodge the lump there. "You'll have to go back to England some day."

There was no telling what Spenser would have answered, for at that moment he was called to the set. But just before he turned away the girl was sure she saw a dread of that future date, written on his face. A dread that matched her own.

He did not refer to the subject again, not directly. But on Saturday he insisted that they look for a house.

"This hotel life is definitely absurd. No place for a cinema star," he informed Sandra smugly. "They tell me I'll be around Superior Studios as long as I care to."

Sandra braked his cockiness. "Until your legs are too long, at least."

"I doubt if I'll have an awkward task. The Withington men are quite dapper. I'll be around quite a while, old girl. Even if the war should end there is my contract. A gentleman can not go back on his word, y'know. My father would have to come to the States."

The girl realized he was consoling her with his strange and somewhat concealed talk. Locating a house was a genuine task, since there were three to be considered. There had been a meeting when Belinda came from school, a meeting solemn to the youngsters, laughable to Sandra. But she retained police and did not disgrace herself while the plans were made.

"Then it is agreed, each shall pay one-third the expenses," boomed Spenser, the chairman. "Belinda will be here only on week-ends, but she'll get her money's worth, I'll wager."

The house selected, after hours of searching, was an English type of detached brick with vines, stately clipped hedges and a brick wall with heavy iron gates and a small gatehouse.

Spenser strutted. "This suits my personality. An English house for an English star. Good spot to entertain my friends."

"What friends?" demanded Belinda. "Magazine salesmen?" She stopped his insufferable swaggering.

During the following week, though, friends did arrive. Not Spenser's, Belinda's and Sandra's. However, since Spenser usurped them, his bragging became true, after a fashion.

The guests were Brody and Bob Wakeman.

Hints on Etiquette

If you meet at a friend's house a person with whom you have long been on unfriendly terms, and the hostess (ignorant of the fact) introduces you, say "How do you do" courteously and avoid embarrassing your hostess.

"The Authority on Authorities"

SIGNAL EACH OTHER

DOUBLE squeeze plays—those which put the pressure on both defenders—do not occur very often. But some large percentage of them would be unworkable if the partners put up the correct opposition. Ordinarily that means that one must signal the other what suit or suits he is going to guard against, or else just the reverse of that—indicate which suit or suits he will not protect. By playing so that he relinquishes his protection against a particular suit, he tells the man across the table to protect it.

Not very hot bidding, that, especially by North. He should have bid 2-No Trumps over the 2-Clubs, and South would have taken it to 3-No Trumps, a clinch contract. But this 5-Clubs doubled paid much bigger dividends.

West led the spade K and, when he saw East's 2, switched to the diamond K, which the A won. Then came a whole string of clubs. After all but one, South retained in dummy the spade Q, heart K-10 and diamond 6, and his own hand held three hearts plus another club. He hoped the opponents had discarded so as to be caught in a squeeze. They had. In fact, on the seventh club, West did that very thing. Until then he had pared down to the spade K, heart Q-8-5 and diamond Q. On that seventh club he studied hard, then made the wrong discard of the diamond Q.

Then came the last club. West, torn between his spade K and three hearts, tossed a heart, so the spade Q was discarded from dummy. Now East was squeezed. He had the diamond J and three hearts. Obligated to guard the diamond 6 with his J, he threw a heart. So three hearts finished the hand.

If West had read East's diamond discards, from the 2 upward, he should have held his diamond Q and spade K to the last East then could have guarded the heart suit with his J-7, and there would have been no squeeze for the extra trick which South scored.

Your Week-End Lesson

How can a defender tell whether to play his ace on the first, the second or the third round of the dummy's suit, in order to block it?

Is it your experience that you buy a bunch of parsley, use some for a meal or two and the rest withers before you can use it? If so, why not grow your own parsley and pick only what you need at the moment. Take a sponge, cut it in half, put it in a bright dish, set it in the kitchen window, moisten it and sprinkle with parsley seeds. Keep it moist and watch it grow.

For individual tarts, bake the crusts on the outside of muffin tins. Cut rich pie dough into circles about 5 inches in diameter, then pinch 6 or 7 pleats in it when you have it cupped over the muffin tins. Bake. By this method the tart crusts look better and are a trifle larger.

Home a School of Christian Living ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON By Alfred J. Buescher

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might, and these words thou shalt teach them diligently to thy children."

Jesus went down to Nazareth with His parents, and "was subject unto them." And Jesus "increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man."

"Wives, submit yourselves unto your husbands, as unto the Lord . . . "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave Himself to it."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Is it your experience that you buy a bunch of parsley, use some for a meal or two and the rest withers before you can use it? If so, why not grow your own parsley and pick only what you need at the moment. Take a sponge, cut it in half, put it in a bright dish, set it in the kitchen window, moisten it and sprinkle with parsley seeds. Keep it moist and watch it grow.

For individual tarts, bake the crusts on the outside of muffin tins. Cut rich pie dough into circles about 5 inches in diameter, then pinch 6 or 7 pleats in it when you have it cupped over the muffin tins. Bake. By this method the tart crusts look better and are a trifle larger.

'PREACHING' IS SERMON SUBJECT SUNDAY MORNING

"The Foolishness of Preaching" is the topic for the sermon to be preached Sunday morning at First Methodist church by the Rev. Clarence Swearingen, pastor.

Such questions will be asked as: Why preaching? What is preaching? When is the sermon a sermon? What is the object of the sermon? When is a sermon "good" or "poor"? How foolish is preaching and when will it cease to be?

Mrs. Richard McAllister will play for her organ numbers "Largo" by Handel; "Trauerlein" by Schumann and "Postlude" by Rineck. Miss Beatrice Sprague will direct the choir in the anthem "So Long, My Soul for Thee" by Lee Rogers.

Members and friends of the church are asked by the Youth Fellowship to contribute canned food, linen, or money for the annual Booth Festival. Articles collected go to the Methodist children's home. CHS Tigers Fight Hard But Lose 12-0 Contest To Big Chillicothe 11

Fighting all the way a game Circleville high school team took a 12-0 defeat from a big, slow Chillicothe team there Friday night.

The Tigers did not win but they did play a good ball game and with a few of the right kind of breaks would have won easily from their Ross county neighbors. The contest was close enough all the way to keep fans on both sides of Hermstein Field cheering with the outcome of the game in doubt until the last few seconds.

The Tiger line played a bang-up game, outcharging the larger opposition most of the game. They failed to stop the hard-charging "Buzz" Morris during the first half but stopped him in the second half.

The first bad break came on the first play from scrimmage. Circleville received the kickoff and lining up quickly without a huddle Jack Hennis fired a pass to Gailand Valentine who was standing out in the open all alone. The pass was perfect but it fell to the ground as the Tigers fans groaned. It looked like a sure touchdown, if the pass had clicked.

Then there was the pass that "Skeet" Smallwood threw to Hennis near the goal line. The play did not count because a Circleville back was in motion. A couple of costly fumbles also hurt the Tiger cause.

Circleville could not gain on the ground but did click with passes said 16.5 foot alley;

Circleville Coal Yards Empty As Miners' Strikes Continue

COLD WINTER IS PREDICTED FOR COMMUNITY

Dealers Say Fuel Will Be Slow Getting Here After Walkouts End

Circleville coal yards, like those throughout most of the nation, are empty of coal.

Local dealers were of the unanimous opinion that a desperately cold winter for coal burners was ahead unless something is done to ease the strike situation.

Shipments are not coming in because the miners are not mining coal as they strike for recognition of their foreman's union.

John L. Lewis realizing the tight grip he holds at this time when the nation needs coal worst, is taking advantage of it, trying to get his unionization demands recognized, coal dealers say.

Until this strike is settled there can be no large shipments of coal they pointed out.

Unfilled orders held by dealers must wait until coal is shipped. Even when it does come there will be no surplus, one dealer asserted.

All told, Circleville and the county is in for a cold winter with little coal they predict.

One dealer reported that he had only one ton on hand. Others reported none.

Last Spring local coal burners signed up for a coal ration of 80 per cent of the last year because of the wartime scarcity of coal. This restriction was lifted, but now because of the coal operators refusal to recognize the foreman's union, or the miners' stubbornness, there again is a great coal shortage.

Even if the dispute is settled, coal is going to be scarce again—just like during the war when there were government restrictions. There will be no surplus the coming winter. Dealers will get only a minimum supply if the strike is settled anytime soon.

'Incendiary Blonde' At Grand

FUNNY business is going on in "Incendiary Blonde," it seems, as Arturo de Cordova lavishes his affections on Betty Hutton. These two co-star in what promises to be the top musical of this season. In technicolor, "Incendiary Blonde" describes the life of Texas Guinan, once queen of the night clubs. In the supporting cast are Barry "Going My Way" Fitzgerald, Charles Ruggles, Bill Goodwin. It plays at the Grand Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Double Feature Billed

GLORIA Jean comes to the screen as a competent dramatic actress in the fast-action melodramatic mystery story, "River Gang," in which Keefe Brasselle has a leading role. Also on the double feature program showing at the Cliftona theatre Sunday and Monday is "Counter-Attack," featuring Paul Muni and Marguerite Chapman.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal.—Existence of a band of almost extinct big-horned sheep in the Big Bear Lake resort region near here was borne out today by Mrs. Charles P. Krauth, who was sitting near a pool when one of the animals charged her.

The Louisiana highway system has 10,098 miles of gravel which costs about $600 per mile per year to maintain as compared with $350 for asphalt and $250 for concrete.

GOVERNMENT IN BIG RELEASE OF SHOTGUN SHELLS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14—Forty million birdshot and buckshot shells were put on sale to wholesalers and retailers by the commerce department Saturday. The lot—which comprises about 6 per cent of the annual peacetime consumption—was released by the Army which had been using the shells for target practice.

If distribution can be effected quickly, these shells should be available at local stores in time for the 1945-46 season. The birdshot is 1½ ounce number eight chilled shot, with a standard powder lead of 3 drams. Consumer's retail ceiling price on the birdshot will be $1.07 per box of 25 and on the buckshot $1.38.

MERCURY DROPS TO NEW LOW MARK OF 33 DEGREES

Lumber jackets and topcoats were very much in evidence on Circleville streets Saturday morning as a heavy frost and the lowest temperature so far, 33, struck the community.

The low temperature came as a shock as the mercury dropped 34 degrees overnight from a high of 67 Friday afternoon. And the weatherman predicted cooler weather to come Saturday under fair skies—perfect football weather.
